The time when Teddy bursts into tears because of the libels of his father and all his friends are trying to comfort him is the most impressive. I am so touched because they have shown true friendship — friends stand by your side. They walk with you.

2. People are different. Although we are close friends, it's natural for us to have different opinions. Getting along with friends is about communication and knowing each other. Whether you pour your heart to your friend or just keep a distance from them determines how solid the friendship is. My best friend, Steve, and I were responsible for the inter-class Debate Competition. We disagreed over issues like the date of Competition due to the clashes of our time table. We argued but at last, we calmed down and came to an agreement. Because of communication, we know each other better and made a plan that we were both satisfied with. A friend listens, understands and respects.
