When the train comes closer to Gordie and Vern and drowns the word 'jump' from Chris and Teddy at the side, I see the true friendship between the four boys. The most impressive part to me is the anxiety of Chris and Teddy. I can feel it in their words and it reminds me of the proverb, 'A friend in need is a friend indeed'. I did experience this during my P.6 graduation camp. Good!

It was a raining evening. After finishing my supper at the canteen, I decided to go back to my room with Kathy, my best friend. It was raining hard with mighty thunder. On the way, we shared an umbrella. However ruthless the rain was, we seemed not hearing any of it. It was the time when we stayed closer than ever and hence our friendship grew deeper. The rain was cold, but my heart was warm.
